Australia's Labor Minister Believes Our Lack of Certain Laws Breeds Discontent.

CRILD WORK IS DEPLORED

Promiscuous Demobilization, It Is Said, May Result

These fundamentals, he says, are the standard length working day, the minimum wage, some general method of protection against unemployment, and proper restrictions against child labor. "This last," he added, "is rather a weak following Americans appear in to-day's overseas casualty list: 11i—C. Benson,

An Advocate of Cooperaton. Having thus provided "a new starting point for democracy." Mr. Beeby says a nation must create a system by which employers and employees can be brought and kept together in cooperative produc-tion. His present task is devising such a system.

He concedes that all this implies Governmental recognition of trade unionism and collective bargaining. But that, he says, came to pass in Australia as an open shop. We already have none as the term open shop is understood in $875,000,000 to $1,250,000,000, and this under labor governments, administering labor legislation as the law of the land.

America, says Mr. Beeby, has im-pressed him as being incoherent (an epithet which H. G. Wells once used of us) as to industrial matters. He thinks our basic trouble is lack of some ce-hestve national labor policy. And he does not see how the unionization of practically all industrial workers can be avoided, for "you can't get industrial regulation without recognition of the right to organize. And I see no hope of dealing with these matters in America unless a centralized control is given to separation of the States and of the people. Under his amendment he would "vest the whole industrial power in the Federal Parliament on the understanding that existing state agencies are taken over and used in the establishment of a uniform system."

The Federal Parliament would also be empowered to enact uniform laws on regulation of factory and shop, industrial safety, workingmen's compensation and accident and social insurance, method of fixing the minimum ware, control of child labor, apprenticeship and vocational training, prescribing the standard working day, with the exceptions there were referred to the executive committee.

Mr. Beeby admitted that under this system labor bargaining collectively could be held to agreement by no compulsion much more effectual than moral suasion and public opinion. But he said his hope was that with the conference of the Serbs Creats and Silvers.
